Response for the New Deal I

This discussion will talk about how and why many common Americans loved FDR, from the texts of “Selections from FDR's First Inaugural Address” and "I A Socialist Trust You". Starting off FDR talked about several points that made him more trustworthy. First off he took the problems of the great depression head on, saying problems with increased taxes, more debt, faults in the industry, farmers have no place to sell, plagues of locusts, and past greed. His head approach signals a genuine president who cares and won’t sit around the problems. In fact, on his first day, shows swift action that has never been done before like regulating/overseeing all banks. Secondly FDR acts like a team leader, motivating Team America to take action and that FDR cannot fix the problems by himself, he needs voters to believe that they can pull themselves out of their situations. Lastly he gives hope to all, his “the only thing we have to fear is fear itself” quote, absolutely sparks a fire in people 's hearts. In addition to his fireside chats, might have been the thing that made him go from being liked to loved. Fireside chats, shows the nation that he can listen to other perspectives and take points in them. It showed that his policy is open to criticism and there is no secrecy. He showed Americans that he can adapt, even taking help from every side of the political spectrum, even from the unpopular socialists, which seems unfavorable to politicians today. In the end americans loved even worshiped to an extent FDR, because reassuring attitude of the problems, gives hope/motivation, shows initiative in his actions and takes input from everyone.
