Response for Chicago 1968: Historical Context

This discussion will talk about the contracts perspectives for and against the war in Vietnam from the texts of "Peace without Conquest, April 7, 1965" and "The Assumptions of the Draft, 1968" The pro Vietnam war perspective says the objective for the fight in Vietnam, preventing the communist attack of North Vietnam to south Vietnam. Their first argument for it is that North Vietnam is evil, things like kidnapping women/children, attacking villagers randomly, if America did not intervene Vietnam would be a cruelty. Secondly it is a fight for global peace, helping in Vietnam would deter other countries from conquest. If another country attacks then America is there to stop them. Lastly the Vietnamese people can really benefit from modern technology, modern medicine can save many lives, and provide food, water and power to them. The arguments against the draft, is that conscription of the draft is not a choice for young men, their lives are not their own, but are possessions of the government to be used whenever and however the government chooses. Secondly argues that the draft card is a way for the government to invoke fear. Fear if they don't sacrifice themselves they will go to prison. The government invoking fear is tyranny and very unamerican. Lastly, although the idea of helping the Vietnamese and the world through means of the draft card is hypocritical as the same factors that are spreading cruelty and evil in the world are the same cruelty as in the draft cards which is used to stop the war.
